

One Thing That Really Annoys Me

So what makes you mad? What idea, habit, policy, law, behavior or practice annoys you so much that you just can't be silent about it anymore? For example, perhaps you have had enough of telemarketers and the way they always know when you're about to sit down to dinner.

Here's your opportunity to get really mad on paper about this thing that annoys you. To get you going, you may want to read some newspaper editorials.

Write a commentary for this essay that includes the following:

- Name this thing that annoys you. What is it exactly?
- What's your history with this thing? Relate personal experiences that show why you dislike this thing so intensely.
- Why does this thing make you angry? Provide the reasons why this thing is worthy of your anger. Be as complete as you can. Don't be afraid to visit the library or the Internet if you need to do a little research to support your claims. Try to make your audience feel and share your anger, your righteousness.
- Finally, tell us how you would do things differently. How would YOU solve the problem, remove this irritation? What changes, new laws, attitudes or behaviors would you employ to "fix" the problem if you had the power? How would the world be a better place if we "did it your way?" Be as thorough as you can with the development of this final section of your essay.
