Broadcast Journalism: TV
Interested in television production? Whether you want to deliver the news as a TV anchor or report as a correspondent on location, come join our team of camera operators, videographers, video editors, news writers and production staff of our TV news show, Cabrillo College News (CCN). CCN correspondents and camera crews have covered events throughout Santa Cruz County. Be a part of our broadcast crew and see yourself and your work on the air.

Broadcast Journalism: Radio
Why just listen to the radio when you can be on it too? Partnering with local radio stations, Cabrillo journalism students can produce and deliver consumer and public affairs programming raising the awareness of local issues in our county. Report on cultural and news worthy events of interest to local listeners and learn the ins and outs of radio production by working at a radio station as an on-air host or correspondent, or behind the scenes as a board operator.

Online Journalism: Web Design; Multimedia and Podcast Delivery
Enjoy creating websites? How about producing streaming video? Want to produce your own podcast music, movie review, or current affairs show? Join the production crew of the online edition of Cabrillo’s newspaper (http://www.cabrillowoicenote.com). As The Voice Online you’ll help design a full featured, interactive, multimedia website using Adobe’s Dreamweaver. Put up RSS feeds, forums, polls, and Macromedia Flash photo galleries. Use Apple’s Final Cut Pro to edit digital video for use in streaming commercial advertisements, public service announcements, and news/feature stories.

Photojournalism
Photos freeze a moment in time, offering us a mirror into who we are and the events which shape our world. Love to take photographs? Join our team of photojournalists; have your photographs published in the print edition of The Voice and on the web via The Voice’s online edition.

Print Journalism: Reporting, Writing, and Editing
Journalists help readers make informed decisions by reporting the news in an accurate and truthful way. Become a reporter for the The Voice. Learn how to do a story—who to interview, what questions to ask, what sources to research—and how to tell it using a news style which informs and engages the reader. Meet interesting people, learn about every subject imaginable, and visit new places as a reporter in search of the next compelling story. Become an editor and help reporters develop and refine their stories so they meet professional publication standards.

Visual Journalism: Graphic Arts, Typography, Art Illustration, and Page Design
Are you a visual thinker? Are you good at telling a story in images? Today's journalists present information visually through photos, maps, charts, graphs, diagrams, and cartoons. Join the art staff of the The Voice. Use Adobe Photoshop to make collages and Adobe Illustrator to draw a diagram. Use fonts to create an attractive look. Use InDesign to bring out the reader's eye through every page by the design decisions you make. Learn to use Adobe's InDesign to bring out the best of the newspaper's content by arranging it into attractive and functional pages.

I’ve met so many people and made so many connections just covering a story it’s unreal. Within two years you can be working in a field you love and that’s a great thing.

—Lisa Johnson, journalism major

Career Opportunities
Cabrillo journalism has great relationships with industry professionals who work at local newspapers, magazines, TV and radio stations.

Cabrillo journalism students work for our local newspapers, The Register Pajaronian and The Sentinel. They are interns at TV stations such as KNTV-11 in San Jose and at radio stations such as KDON.

Cabrillo journalism alumni include Tarmo Hannula, photojournalist at the Pajaronian; and Bill Lovejoy, photojournalist at The Sentinel.

Come explore journalism as a career option and gain valuable field experience by working closely with professional journalists in the print and broadcast industry.

View the Journalism classes online: cabrillo.edu/programs
Journalists are reporters, editors, photographers, graphic artists, researchers, interviewers, camera operators, videographers—and more.

They tell the stories of our lives by talking to every day and famous people, digging through documents, snapping photos, asking questions, and writing and reporting about issues and events.

Journalists love their jobs because they believe in what they do. They use words, drawings, photographs, video and the Internet to help people make sense of what is happening locally (in their schools, businesses, places of worship, government), across the nation, and throughout the globe.

And they try to tell these stories in the most interesting, accurate, and informative way to make the world a better place.